

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method with which competing resource requests can be processed in accordance with a predefined priority list of the different requesting processes, without necessitating a real-time operating system or a complete handshake protocol mechanism for processing the messages between an assignment device and requesting devices or processes.

The methods and systems can be used in service-feature servers of switching devices which are preferably connected via a CTI interface to the switching device.